Provides the Sheriff's Office with accurate criminal information and statistical reports via proper investigative analysis regarding criminal activity, crime patterns, and identification of potential suspects. Using quantitative and qualitative methodology, researches, compiles, analyzes, and interprets statistical data from a variety of sources, including offense and arrest reports, census, economic, and demographic reports and related data. Works with outside agencies by sharing information concerning gathered data to identify criminal activity, patterns, trends, and suspects.

- Collects, collates, and analyzes data relating to crimes from case reports, supplements, and other sources. Crimes include, but not limited to, burglary, robbery, drug trafficking, gang activity, sexual assaults, criminal trespass auto, motor vehicle thefts, assaults, homicide, and domestic violence. Disseminates information about crime patterns and trends in easy to understand and succinct written reports, charts, graphs, and oral briefings.
- Performs statistical and analytical research using computer data software, random statistical sampling, correlation and regression analysis, and probability studies; analyzes and interprets information to find significant differences and similarities in the information, or in the relationship among the various pieces of information and prepares conclusions and forecasts based on data summaries.
- Studies criminal intelligence and prepares analyses to reflect contacts and associations among criminals and criminal organizations, including visual investigative analyses to depict progress of investigations; telephone analyses to show contact among criminals graphically and financial activity analyses.
- Provides criminal intelligence data to Sheriff's Office divisions on a regular basis in the most useful formats; prepares time-sensitive reports and computerized mapping on crime data and trends for police personnel to use in their daily work; maintains the integrity and confidentiality of job-specific files, records, reports, maps, and databases
- Researches complex information from criminal intelligence files, written reports, information from other law enforcement sources, and memory; prepares and maintains dossiers on targeted criminals and/or groups; creates link, telephone, financial, and profile charts in accordance with established procedures to aid in criminal investigations.
- Collects, collates, and analyzes crime intelligence reports for content, credibility, and usefulness from a variety of sources to include Deputies, other law enforcement agencies, and informants; applies knowledge of the crime intelligence collection process, content, and the importance of the intelligence acquired in order to provide supervisors with information upon which to base policy decisions.
- Develops and presents information to line-level personnel, supervisory personnel, prosecutors, juries, and the general public.
- Serves as primary liaison with outside agency personnel for Crime Analyst related issues, committees, and task forces to include collaboration, site visits, and attending/hosting meetings.
- Collaborates with surrounding agencies regarding cases or events occurring in multiple jurisdictions.
- May participate in riding along with Deputies; attends shift briefings as requested.
- Performs other duties as required.
